About

Boston Symposium on Economics is an annual, student-run public panel conference hosted by Northeastern University's Women in Economics and Economics Society. The event brings a wide variety of experts from academic, business, nonprofit, and policymaking realms to Northeastern for a discussion of critical economic issues. The event is open to all majors and is a great way to get engaged with major topics affecting our world today.

2023 Theme: The Impact of Emerging Tech on Developing Economies

As we enter a “Fourth Industrial Revolution,” it is an opportune time to learn more about the era of digital transformation across the globe and discuss how developing economies adapt to these changes. Symposium attendees will have the opportunity to engage with a diverse group of business professionals and established economists to understand the nuances of our global economy and technological proliferation. In the age of rapid globalization and technological innovation, the BSOE hopes to facilitate discussion about the tech gap and protecting the future of our planet.
