ACCELERATE YOUR STUDIES

If you are an academically outstanding, highly motivated and resourceful student interested in public affairs, you can start earning a master’s degree during your junior year while completing your bachelor’s degree. “Double count” up to 16 graduate credits toward both your graduate and undergraduate degree requirements, and complete a rigorous and rewarding full-curriculum master’s degree one year earlier than a traditional program.

BENEFITS

> The challenge of advanced academic coursework during both undergraduate and graduate studies.
> The opportunity to enter the job market with an advanced degree one full year earlier than through a traditional master’s program.
> Reduced total cost of a master’s degree.
> An expanded professional network of graduate-level connections—professors, mentors, and the expansive Northeastern University global alumni network.

“I chose to enroll in this program because I’ve always been interested in International Conflict. My co-op in India increased my passion for these issues. The fact that my current scholarship will partially cover my graduate education is a plus.”

—Alex R Poniatowski, B.S. in Political Science, MS in Security and Resilience Studies

ELIGIBLE PROGRAMS

> M.A. in Political Science
> M.S. in Security and Resilience

APPLY TODAY

Make appointments with your undergraduate academic advisor and the graduate program director of the master’s program into which you seek admission.

FOLLOW US – #NUPOLISCI

Northeastern University College of Social Sciences and Humanities
northeastern.edu/polisci | 617.373.4404 | r.trovato@northeastern.edu