Access to reproductive health services, including abortion, is one of the most contested political, social, cultural, and religious issues today. This class analyzes the social, legal, and economic barriers to accessing reproductive healthcare domestically and internationally. We draw on various tools including critical race theory, critical legal theory, sociology of science, human rights, feminist theory, and a range of public health methods. The class covers domestic, regional, and international legal and regulatory frameworks on sexual reproductive health.