Film/Video Production:

1988 Environment Under Fire: Ecology and Politics in Central America. Produced by the Environmental Project On Central America (EPOCA) of Earth Island Institute, San Francisco, 1988. In 1987, I co-organized a delegation representing a number of major environmental organizations from across the United States for a fact-finding tour of Central America. The delegation investigated the connections between the region's social, political, economic, and ecological crises. These findings were then produced into the video, which I co-researched and co-organized. It also won the Silver Award at both the Houston International Film and Video Festival and the Big Muddy Film and Video Festival.
